THE CORNELL HOTEL & RESTAURANT ADMINISTRATION QUARTERLY

(This magazine is indexed by subject each year in its Bibliography, published in the August (No. 2) issue.)

Table of Contents for Volume 7

May 1966 • Vol. 7, No. 1

FOOD SERVICE PLANNING

Today's Challenge in Food Service Planning, Donald Greenaway. NRA's executive vice president talks about business survival in American society. P. 2–4, 8.

The Evolution of a New Food Service Project. The step-by-step development of a new food facility by owner, architect and consultants is charted. P. 5–8.

Check List for Programing, Planning, and Designing the New Food Service Operation, Prof. O. Ernest Bangs. P. 9–14, 21.

The Market-Feasibility Study in Food Facilities Planning, Henry W. Espersen. The feasibility study should provide both cost and income estimates for the proposed facility. Two sets of sample estimates are given. P. 15–21.

The Operational Model in Food Service Planning, Prof. Robert M. Chase and Richard A. Compton. Questions and answers about planning layouts and allocating space for the proposed operating plant. P. 22–23, 38.

The Legal Aspects of Building a New Food Service Operation, Prof. John H. Sherry. A lawyer gives advice on drawing up the restaurant lease and the construction contracts. P. 24–28.

How to Work with Architects, William R. Jarratt. The architect's part in planning and developing a new food service facility. P. 29–38.

Buying the Job: How to Deal with Contractors, Prof. Paul R. Broten. Common contract arrangements, contractor's fees, and instructions to bidders are discussed in full detail. P. 39–48.

Food Service Equipment Contractors, I. S. Anoff. The kitchen equipment dealer handles plans, specifications, sale, and installation of equipment. P. 49–52.

Success Factors in Convenience Foods, Dr. Harold M. Rich. A report from the Kitchens of Sara Lee. P. 53–54.

Stouffer's Restaurant Development. News from the Stouffer Foods Corporation and a description of the new Pier W restaurant. P. 55–56.

Ready Foods for Hotel a la Carte Service. Industry leaders sample Ready Foods at Cornell's Hotel School. P. 56–57.

Book Reviews. P. 58.

How to Own a Restaurant, Raymond M. Cantwell. The author tells how he planned, financed, and made a success of his own restaurant. P. 59–68.

Western Kebabs and Danish Pork Loin—Tested Quantity Recipes. (Color Insert between P. 68–69.)

Schrafft's New Image: Menu and Decor. Schrafft's restaurant has been re-designed to attract the younger crowd and increase profits. P. 68–72.

Resort Hotel Management: Answering Reservation Inquiries, H. Victor Grohmann. Results of a survey conducted by the author indicate that resort operators should pay closer attention to reservation inquiries. P. 73–80.

The Task-Unit Approach to On-the-Job Training, John M. Welch, Ph.D. Chapter 5, "A Functional Analysis of the Food Service Establishment." P. 81–96.

Bacteriological Control in Sanitation, Prof. James C. White. What food service people should know about bacteria in food. P. 97–103, 119.

Food Protection in Food Service, James R. Reed. Good food practices benefit both the dining public and the food service operator. P. 104–110.

Public Health Regulations, Edwin L. Ruppert. Federal, state, and local regulations as they affect the food service operator. P. 111–119.

August 1966 • Vol. 7, No. 2

RESEARCH ISSUE

The Legal Aspects of Swimming Pool Operation, Prof. John H. Sherry. The innkeeper's or club operator's duty is to use ordinary and reasonable care in pool construction, maintenance, and supervision and to provide an adequate degree of general safety. He is not an insurer of guest safety. Legal cases are cited. P. 2–7.

Clubs in Town and Country. A short history of clubs and of the problems which beset them today. P. 8–14.

The Key to Club Life, Lee Gottlieb. The promotion director for the Playboy Club analyzes why men join clubs, and draws the profile of typical club members. P. 14–18.

Man-Made "Meat"—Why? A review of the world's protein shortage and of what is being done to alleviate the protein gap. P. 19–20.

Meat Analogues—A New Food Concept, A. D. Odell, Ph.D. A description of General Mills' Bontrae, a soybean derivative which can be spun into tissue and formed into whole meat parts, slices, cubes, and granules. P. 20–24.

Textiles in a Changing World, Prof. Emilie T. Hall. Presently over 1,000 man-made fibers are available and more are yet to come. P. 25–27.

The American Hotel and Motel Business, 1946–65. A review of Literature of the Lodging Market, part of a long term research program conducted for AH & MA; and a review of "An Essay on Hotels," Harry Reasoner, CBS–TV, June 28, 1966. P. 28–29.

"Bath with a Room"—A New Hotel-Motel First? Prof. Robert M. Chase. A review of Alexander Kira's new book The Bathroom. P. 30–31.

Romano Duckling and Chicken Pineapple—Tested Quantity Recipes. (Color Insert between P. 32–33.)

A New Hotel Management System, H. Alexander MacLennan. Before hotels can operate effective data processing programs they need to revise their management systems. This article outlines details, step by step. P. 33–48.

A Bibliography for Hotels and Restaurants, Katherine Spinney. Articles selected from the hotel and restaurant press are indexed according to subject and content. Lists of publishers and trade organizations are also given. P. 49–96.

November 1966 • Vol. 7, No. 3

FOOD AND BEVERAGE MERCHANDISING

Food Merchandising—Gratifying Human Needs. A restaurant must cater to the customer's emotional needs as well as to his appetite. The food service industry can be divided into three categories according to customer needs: 1) the captive market, 2) the mass market, 3) the status market. P. 2–8, 19.

Hotel Food and Beverage Management, Allen W. Hubsch. Food and beverage facilities can become new profit centers for hotels. Illustrations show how each of HCA's hotel dining rooms is unique, while maintaining the company's standards for fine food and service.

Hotel Food and Beverage Merchandising, James Nassikas. The restaurants and bars of HCA's Washington Mayflower were re-designed for greater customer appeal and sales. P. 20–29.

Food and Beverage Control, Archie Casbarian. HCA uses standardized check lists for controlling beverages, sales, banquets, food, and staffing. P. 30–36.

Don't Let It Sit There—Sell It! Bob Stein. The uses of the different advertising media in building restaurant business. P. 37–48.

5 Ways to Stretch Your Advertising Budget, George B. Frank. How to get more space and/or higher attention-value for your advertising dollar. P. 49–51.

Popular Cuts of Beef, the National Livestock and Meat Board. A list of names used in different sections of the U.S. P. 52.

Buffet Service. Chapter reprinted from The Essentials of Good Table Service, revised 1966 and published by Cornell's Hotel School. P. 53–62.

Airline Food Service—"Pie in the Sky?" Chester K. Litman. Refrigeration of airline food is analyzed by the President of Koch Refrigerators, Inc. P. 63–68.

Leg of Lamb, Lombardy Style and Lemon Baked Chicken— Tested Quantity Recipes. (Color Insert between P. 68–69.)

Food Flavor, L. J. Minor, Ph.D. A review of scientific research on food flavor and odor, and the development of synthetic flavorings for natural and man-made foods. P. 69–83.

Sweden's NACKA Hospital Food System, Prof. Allan Bjorkman and K. A. Delphin. A central kitchen prepares, packages and chills products to be delivered to some ten hospitals within Greater Stockholm. P. 84–87.

Managers—Developing the New Breed, Donald E. Lundberg, Ph.D. The wisest management style recognizes that human nature is both idealistic and Machiavellian, humanitarian and selfish. P. 88–93.

Great Britain's Industrial Training Act, John M. Welch, Ph.D. A report on Britain's new task-unit approach for training hotel employees and the method of financing such training. P. 94–96.

February 1967 • Vol. 7, No. 4

1967—INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL YEAR

Alert Hosts in the Marketing Age, Edward C. Bursk. Hotel management must make intelligent decisions and innovations in marketing its services to customers, who constitute its most valuable investment. P. 2–8.

Closing the Marketing Gap, William Morton. Marketing is intended to meet or even create customer needs, not merely to sell products. Future in-city hotels may cater to jumbo jet traffic, as motor hotels serve the needs of automobile travelers. P. 9–14.

1967—International Travel Year. The most recent international travel statistics and highlights are given, plus information about international hotel systems and financing, airline carriers, and hotel training programs abroad. P. 17–31.

The Outlook for International Travel. Current tourism reports from 23 countries around the world. P. 32–53.

The Cult of the Place Dropper, Albert E. Koehl. Observations on the international travel market. P. 54–60.

Boola-Boola. A fable of modern tourism development in an unindustrialized island-country. P. 61–64.

Green Pepper Steak and Almond Veal Cutlet—Tested Quantity Recipes. (Color Insert between P. 64–65.)

International Hotel Development, Robert E. Smith. An exposition on methods of financing international hotels, and recommendations to host governments for encouraging tourism. P. 65–70, 75.

Building International Hotels, Robert Huyot. The president of Intercontinental Hotels describes how an international hotel is researched, planned, and–if feasible–built. P. 71–75.

How to Merchandise Native Food, Harry Friedman. Hints on the presentation of specialty dishes and regional motifs. P. 76.

Travel—The Road to Peace and Profit, James C. Gross. NATO (National Association of Travel Organizations) promotes foreign travel to the United States and encourages more travel by Americans within their own country. P. 77–79.

Travel U.S.A. Analysis of current travel trends in the United States. Charts and tables are presented. P. 80–87, 91.

Federal Assistance for Tourism Projects, Miss Rose McKee. The new Economic Development Administration aids tourism development in less prosperous regions of the U.S. P. 88–91.

U.S.A. Area Developments: Resort Development in NE Minnesota, George Rossman, P. 92–94, 97; West Virginia's New State Lodges, Edward R. Johnson, P. 95–97; Ohio's New State Lodges, P. 97; Saratoga's Performing Arts Center, Francis J. Quinn, P. 98–101; Financing for Ithaca Festival, P. 101.

Rockresorts Company, office of Laurance S. Rockefeller. Recreation/resort areas have been built-up in undeveloped parts of Hawaii and the Carribean by private investment. P. 102–109.

ESSO's European Motor Inns, Standard Oil of New Jersey. Esso is currently establishing joint motel and service station projects along major automobile routes throughout Europe. P. 110–113.

Moscow Airport Food Service. Lothar Kreck. Food is good, service friendly, and menu-pricing unique in Moscow Airport, according to one American observer. P. 114–116.

Carpets Woven of Wool and Stainless Steel, Richard A. Compton. Research indicates that Brunswick's new carpet containing steel fibers is static free and comparatively soil-resistant. P. 117–120.

New Equipment Expedites Data Processing. Professor Sayles, head of the School's Research Division, demonstrates the use of equipment for a hotel data processing system. P. 121–126.

Management of Treadway Inns Is Expedited by Centralized Data Processing Services, J. Frank Birdsall, Jr. A description of Treadway's new Datapro Corporation and how it operates. P. 127–134.

Book Reviews. P. 135–136.

tional about
, and eports

ations

in an

Quan-

An ex-
, and urism.

dent of hotel
.

nts on
fs. P.

NATO
es for-travel

United

McKee.
tourism 88–91.

E Min-
's New s New
, Fran-
P. 101.

r. Recd parts
P. 102–

Jersey. station Europe.

s good,
Airport,

Compntaining
ant. P.

Sayles,
the use 21–126.

tralized
scription
perates.